

Architecture rotating revision board game

Words to describe lines	Rooms	External features of buildings	Changes in Tokyo during your lifetime	START Sentences describing this building that your partners agree with
Janglish connected to architecture and its British or American versions	Instructions Everyone put a counter each on the Start square. To move, students must make correct sentences that match the instructions in the box they are on, stopping counting the first time that they make a mistake. For example, if they say three things that their partner agrees with about this building and then their partner disagrees with their fourth statement, they can then move three squares clockwise and their next task will be to name 3D shapes. The winner is the first person to get all the way around the board or the person who is leading when the teacher stops the game.			Sentences describing Chiba that your partners agree with
Architecture words which have different meanings in Japanese and English				Sentences about British homes that your partners agree with
2D shapes				3D shapes
Dimensions				Types of house
Storage in a house				Types of roof
Words connected to floors				True sentences about where your partner is living
Words connected to going up and down in buildings				Cities your partner wouldn't like to live in Different kinds of lighting				Cities your partner would like to live in Building materials				Important factors when choosing a city that your partner agrees with
Kinds of accommodation				Negative things about Tokyo that your partner agrees with Negative adjectives to describe cities	Positive adjectives to describe cities	Cities your partner wouldn't like to visit	Cities your partner would like to visit	Positive things about Tokyo that your partner agrees with