Countable uncountable going to travel mimes going to for plans and predictions/ travel vocabulary/ countable and uncountable

Worksheet 1: Going to travel mimes
Choose an action below. Very slowly mime the lead up to the action only. So the future tense sentence is correct, do not start doing the thing written below but only the time before it, e.g. you can mime squeezing a bottle on sun cream into your hands but stop before the sun cream actually touches your shoulders. Continue leading up to that action until your partner guesses, then take turns doing the same for different mimes below.

- You are going to put some sun cream onto your shoulders.
- You are going to have a nap.
- You are going to eat some peanuts.
- You are going to put some suitcases onto the check in counter scales to be weighed.
- You are going to put some luggage into the overhead locker.
- You are going to pack your clothes into a suitcase.
- You are going to put on some sunglasses.
- You are going to order some lunch.
- You are going to put on some headphones.
- You are going to show your passport and ticket to the check in clerk.
- You are going to eat an in-flight meal.
- You are going to put your possessions through the X-ray machine.
- The plane is going to land.
- You are going to put a padlock on your rucksack.
- You are going to take some luggage off the carousel.
- You are going to float on the sea on an airbed.
- You are going to put on an oxygen mask.
- You are going to drink a cup of tea.
- You are going to drink some alcohol.
- You are going to give the bell boy a tip.
- You are going to change some money into Australian Dollars.
- You are going to phone home on a public phone.
- You are going to give a gift to your host family.
- You are going to have a shower.

Put the correct form of each noun in each gap on the next page below by adding “a”, “some” and/ or “-s”, check above, then discuss:

- Which words are countable, and which words are uncountable?
- Which countable nouns are almost always used in the plural (with “-s”)?
- What are the rules for combining nouns with “a”, “some” and “-s”?

Choose one place in the world where you would like to go on holiday and write it secretly in your notebook. Tell your partner what things you are going to take with you one line at a time and see if they can guess where you are going to go.

downloaded from https://tefltastic.com

Worksheet 2: Countable/ uncountable travel vocabulary presentation

You are going to put _____ (sun cream) onto your shoulders.

You are going to have _____ (nap).

You are going to eat _____ (peanut).

You are going to put _____ (suitcase) onto the check in counter scales to be weighed.

You are going to put _____ (baggage) into the overhead locker.

You are going to pack your clothes into _____ (suitcase).

You are going to put on _____ (sunglass).

You are going to order _____ (lunch).

You are going to put on _____ (headphone).

You are going to eat _____ (in-flight meal).

You are going to put your _____ (possession) through the X-ray machine.

You are going to put _____ (padlock) on your rucksack.

You are going to take _____ (luggage) off the carousel.

You are going to float on the sea on _____ (airbed).

You are going to put on _____ (oxygen mask).

You are going to drink _____ (cup tea).

You are going to drink _____ (alcohol).

You are going to give the bell boy _____(tip).

You are going to change _____ (money) into _____ (Australian Dollar).

You are going to phone home on _____ (public phone).

You are going to give _____ (gift) to your host family.

You are going to have _____ (shower).

downloaded from https://tefltastic.com