Dependent prepositions pelmanism and snap
Face to Face Advanced Units 1A and 1B

Instructions for teachers
Note that the dependent prepositions on this worksheet at all from Face to Face Advanced, so you'll probably want to change at least some of the cards if you are teaching a different level and/ or from a different textbook. The games will work with all dependent prepositions and all levels, as long as you have enough of each group of card and the right number of categories.

Before starting the games, you might want to ask students to put all the cards into three columns by the preposition that they take. If they get stuck, tell them the three prepositions, tell them the number that should be in each category, and/ or give out a copy of the worksheets and tell them that the three categories are already grouped together so they just need to find the place where the list changes to the next preposition.

Dependent prepositions pelmanism/ pairs/ memory game
Students spread all of the cards face down across the table. They get one point for each pair they can find which have the same preposition missing. If the two cards have different words missing, then they put them back face down in the same place.

Dependent prepositions snap
Students deal out all the cards but can't look at the cards that they have. They take turns turning over the top card from their pack and race to shout out "Snap!" if the last two cards to be turned over have the same preposition missing. If they are right, they get all the cards on the table. If they shout "Snap!" when the last two cards don't match, they have to give two cards to their partner(s) as punishment. The winner is the person who gets all the cards or has most cards when the teacher stops the game.
